

Policy on Self-Archiving

For all British Journal of Diabetes articles from 2024, authors retain the copyright of their material and are allowed to self-archive their work as HTML or Word files in institutional repositories and on the web. Authors can republish the material, for example, as a book chapter.

It is important to note that publication in another scholarly journal, while possible from a copyright point of view, is generally considered duplicate publication and scientific misconduct.

In all cases of republication or self-archiving, the original source (citation) should be provided, including the link to the original British Journal of Diabetes article on <https://bjd-abcd.com/>, and a note should be included that the work is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution License CC-BY 4.0.

For all articles published before 2024 authors are required to seek permission from the copyright owners, British Journal of Diabetes.